A BRIEF CONCEPT NOTE

The discipline of Anthropology being a holistic one, tries to explore every dimension of human life in the context of society and culture. The branches of the discipline with their own specialized subfields and other allied disciplines continuously explore human variation and evolution worldwide with the objectives of establishing the idea of a single human species identity. The headway in technological sophistication in the field of scientific research gives a pace in this exploration not only in the biological domain rather the other two major branches also undergo a drastic change in their orientation of viewing humanity and the interrelationship between human communities with the environment they live and exploit.

The present Seminar will endeavour to explore the various issues and provide the opportunity to come together and exchange ideas.
